

Join Us Thursday for the UAC

We invite all users to join us at the Users Advisory Committee (UAC) meeting on Thursday at noon this week. We use these meetings to disseminate updates on ongoing projects and tool status changes to the users, and as a platform for users to voice concerns from the community to staff for consideration and intervention. If you are the curious type who wants to know the how and why, or if you have concerns about anything happening in the NRF, we would like you to join us. We do request each active research group send at least one representative to relay important updates or changes to their group. You can attend in person in our NRF 115 conference room (everyone is welcome to bring their lunch), or join us on Zoom.

Don't forget, we detailed the holiday closure schedule in our November 4th edition of the weekly update. You can review those details on our Microsoft teams archive, or they are summarized below in the events list. If you need clarification or special arrangements made, the UAC is the perfect place to start that dialogue.

If you need (or just want) to report something to staff while remaining anonymous, please use the link above to submit the details to staff. You do have to be logged into our system (prevents SPAM messages) but your name/userID will NOT be recorded with your message to staff.
